

Christians, what do you think of St Augustine's Confessions? All the shadows of doubt were dispelled. His Confessions would also become one of the first autobiographies in Western history, and a literary masterpiece as well. Now, I'm not saying Augustine was perfect. Gandhi could have echoed St. Augustine's words: "Many people who know me, and others who do not know me but who have heard of me or read my books, wish to hear what I am now, at this moment, as I set down my confessions. They cannot lay their ears to my heart, and yet it is in my heart that I am what I am." So they wish to hear. Notes Queries, No. 1, Saturday, March 1, 1914, by Notes Queries, No. 1, Saturday, March 1, 1914, by Various. St. Augustine says the reason why humans behave as they do is because they are not living in their true home. In Rita Hayworth's first film, for example, Dante's Inferno is a failing Coney Island concession, and Margarita Cansino plays the part of Rita Cansino playing herself.
